BOOK SYNOPSIS

"Before she found the earring, Frida Lowe had never doubted her husbands fidelity. Damien, a sophisticated and affluent member of the British foreign service, was not the philandering type, or so she had always thought. Now, after ten years of marriage, they have come to Fridas home country of Iceland, where Damien has been made Her Majestys Ambassador. As the Icelandic economy begins to spiral out of control, Frida and Damiens marriage starts to unravel. Amidst the chaos, Frida seeks refuge in a small fishing village on Icelands West Fjords, where a chance encounter with a stranger turns out to have greater implications than she could ever have foreseen. With Iceland and Britain locked in a bitter diplomatic dispute, Frida is forced to examine her loyalties and ultimately answer the question: what exactly constitutes betrayal?"--Back cover.
